

Say Goodbye to Bush's Global Gag Rule

The global gag rule, which President Bush reinstated on his first business day in 2001, prohibits the United States from funding any overseas health clinic unless it agrees not to use funding from any other source for abortion services, abortion-related advocacy, or abortion counseling or referrals. The global gag rule blocks the world's poorest women from access to basic birth control. As long as Bush's horrendous policy stays in place, the world's poorest women have diminished access to reproductive health care.

We, the undersigned, urge Congress to repeal the global gag rule.
