Re: Polling shows that Americans remain overwhelmingly supportive of abortion rights, an issue that will be key vote driver in midterms

As the anti-choice supermajority on the U.S. Supreme Court prepares to overturn Roe v. Wade and state lawmakers across the country escalate their attacks on abortion, new polling confirms that the vast majority of Americans support abortion rights and access and it will be a key issue for voters in the midterm elections.

The polling also indicates that the Supreme Court ruling in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization—a direct challenge to Roe expected in the coming weeks—will galvanize voters to vote for candidates who will protect and expand reproductive freedom.

- In the wake of the Supreme Court's leaked draft majority opinion, new polling from Navigator Research shows that more than half of Americans say the Supreme Court potentially overturning Roe v. Wade makes them more motivated to vote in 2022, including 71% of Democrats.
- A new Gallup poll found that voters are more likely to name abortion as a key issue for them in the midterms than in any previous election year.
- A recent PerryUndem poll found that over a third of voters (37%) say they'd feel more likely to participate in the midterms as a result of a ruling that allows bans on abortion—and among voters that say a Supreme Court decision restricting abortion rights would affect who they vote for, 75% say they'd be more likely to vote for a candidate who supports abortion rights and access.
- A recent NBC News poll found—by a more than 2-1 margin—that voters are “more likely” to support candidates who support Roe. Meanwhile, the polling also found by a roughly 3-1 margin that voters said they were “less likely” to back a candidate who supports ending Roe.

We've long known that the vast majority of people in the United States support reproductive freedom. A Supreme Court decision overturning Roe will only make voters more determined to elect champions who we can count on to protect our fundamental rights.

The 2022 midterm elections come as abortion rights and access in the United States face an urgent and dire crisis. If the Supreme Court overturns Roe as they are expected to do in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, 28 states would likely move to ban abortion outright. Of those, 13 states already have “trigger bans” in place. Even as Roe stands, state lawmakers have escalated their attacks on abortion access. Anti-choice lawmakers have already filed over 500 restrictions on abortion this year.

Voters will be looking to candidates up and down the ballot—including in state legislative, attorneys general, secretaries of state, gubernatorial, and federal races—to make clear their commitment to protecting abortion access. With Roe hanging in the balance, strong majorities of Americans—in red, blue, and purple states—are eager to elect leaders that reflect the values of the 8 in 10 Americans who support the legal right to abortion.
